With over a decade of experience in software product development, I'm passionate about creating user-friendly, and high-performing web products that balance design, usability, and reliability. Over the past several years, I've focused on modern web development, recently using React, and built a strong foundation in product thinking and frontend craftsmanship.

I combine a product-focused mindset with solid technical skills in analytics, testing, monitoring, and release management. Known for my attention to detail and collaborative approach, I take pride in delivering high-quality, maintainable work.
